

Final Report

The team from KPB CIBA (Society for Bird Conservation) worked closely with Birdlife International and the Gede Pangrango National Park in carrying out their work. They developed a three day training course in bird identification techniques which they offered to park rangers, local volunteer organisations, and local communities.

Over a period of months they gave this course several times, at different locations in the Park, and subsequently followed up to find out how well the taught material and techniques had been retained. Overall the courses were found to be informative and helpful, and the participants were highly enthusiastic. Bringing different stakeholders together to cooperate in conserving the birds and their habitats has proven to be successful.