

Project Update: January 2010

This month we repeated the questionnaire for the students in order to evaluate their conservation awareness after the workshops we had in their schools. The Turtle Field Guide books were donated to the schools libraries. We participated again in the Conservation International radio programme. We are preparing printed material about the project, with information, results and conservation strategies; to give to the communities we worked with. The turtle's diet material is being processed in the lab. We will start to prepare the final reports and manuscripts. A project continuation is being discussed with the schools and the local government.
