

Project Update: December 2012

We have just completed the plant photography fieldwork and workshops for our project in Mindanao and are happy to report that it was a great success. The workshops attracted many participants from all over the Philippines and the fieldwork resulted in amongst others the discovery of a second population of the highly endangered species Rafflesia schadenbergiana (3rd largest flower in the world; only one extant population was known thus far) and possible new orchid and loranth species.
