

Project Update: October 2013

From 16th - 20th September 2013 in the Convention Palace, Havana, Cuba, took place the XVII Congress of the Mesoamerican Society for the Biology and the Conservation (SMBC), where participated ca. 500 delegates of 20 countries. The congress was an ideal space to promote and visualised the activities carried on the frame of the RSG projects on conservation of vascular epiphytes with the exposition of the main results in a poster Vascular epiphytes of Guamuhaya range: implementing Action Plan for its conservation. An important achievement of the meeting was the creation of a SMBC thematic interesting group on vegetal diversity, where our project team is included, as a way to enhance and promote the investigation on plants in the Mesoamerican region. The whole project team work could enjoy the congress and share the experiences of the work with epiphytes and communitarians of the Guamuhaya range.
