Project Update: September 2015
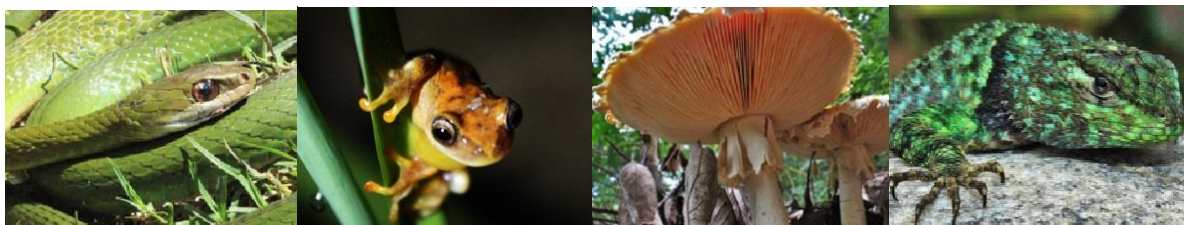

During August 2015, a fourth workshop took place in the community of San Juan Lachao. Community members were trained in the use of cybertracker to facilitate data gathering and analysis. Moreover, data was analysed from a number of ecosystem services and climate factors and a monitoring plan was defined to understand if livestock and deer influence forest regeneration in the forest management areas. Six parcels will be set to understand this relationship.

Left: Training on the use of cybertracker. Right: Community members setting exclusion parcels to understand the impact of livestock and deer on forest regeneration

Biodiversity photos taken by the community´s monitoring team (photos belong to the community of San Juan Lachao).