

Project Update: May 2016

I am happy to let you know about the successful trapping, tagging and release of fourth bearded vulture in Nepal. After a long patience from last Friday we were able to do that. The weather in this part is becoming crazy. We are having frequent rain and fog most of the time. Today was foggy but it was opened frequently in the middle. After a long wait we were able to capture 2nd year bird weight about 5 kg. Simon's guess is the female but we will know exact later. Today we used tag no 1602 on this bird.

I am in field to tag bearded vultures with GPS devices. We are now able to trap 4 birds and all are equipped with GPS-GSM telemetry units. Lot of local people were engaged at our project site and helped us. I am now attaching couple of pictures to post on the web site.
