

Project Update: March 2017

Presentation of the Project "Characterization of the food web in the Francisco Coloane Marine Area, Chile: Trophic role of the humpback whale and of their main preys". This conference was given on February 17th 2017 at the Chilean Antarctic Institute, in the city of Punta Arenas.

The conference was aimed at the community, and people from several Scientific Institutions, such as the Chilean Antarctic Institute, Cequa Foundation, the National Fisheries Service, as well as teachers, high school students, local newspapers, among others.

During the talk, the main activities of the project were presented and described and people were invited to participate in future informative talks. Moreover, children were invited to participate in environmental educational talks and workshops that will be proposed for the upcoming months.