

Project Update: May 2010

We have conducted the training in the three additional districts in Rivercess County. About 75 women from 12 women's groups were involved in the training. The training provided the women with skills in leadership and advocacy and created a forum for them to discuss how to be more proactive in natural resources management issues in their communities. We are now putting these groups into clusters to form the Women Conservation Group (WCG) as planned.
