

Project Update: June 2010

Project activities in last month have more focused to informal meetings with farmers in order to collect some information about threats and opportunities that would be realized in the next planting season.

Outputs from last month's activities ensure there is more motivation from farmers who had not been participants in the same villages in our project. They asked us to help them with paddy planting techniques using the organic approach.

We have no definite schedules for next planting season in this month, because there are issues that mean the schedule may change. For example, the source of water, and the Agriculture Department's planting's schedule - the farmers said season would be in September, and others.
