

Project Update: September 2017

On September 4th and 5th 2017, the ninth environmental workshop was held. During these days, the topic of measuring the impact of environmental education programmes and activities was presented to teachers. Teachers learned the way they can measure the impact of the activities they do with their students and/or audiences, as well as the importance of measuring that impact. Results of the project were also presented to teachers (For more information about it, please check the previous report). After the presentation, teachers had a discussion about their replication activities. Each teacher chose the best of their activities to present at the final workshop to be held on October 4th 2017, where judges will decide who get the first three awards of replication.

Teacher deciding his best replication activity