

Project Update: August 2019

Our sound analysis and insect categorisation are well underway and the biopsy and dropping samples are soon to be sent for genetic analysis. Bernard (our volunteer) has been tasked with sorting our insect to order and identifying crop pests during his college holidays and is doing a great job; very valuable experience for an agricultural management student! We have been very lucky to work with a wide range of specialists and recently virologists from the University of Zambia visited to practice ecological research techniques and to share experiences.

Left: Sharing experience with our collaborators. Right: Watching for bats at a roost at a school.
