

Project Update: March 2021

First and foremost, however, I would like to inform you that we have had some major success within the last few months; we have found a number of seahorses inhabiting my gabions. We have managed to spot one of the female Knysna seahorses using my video data and one in-situ as well as finding a pregnant male seahorse whilst in-situ. This is but only a small part of the success of the project...the gabions are coming alive with fish and invertebrates utilising them and turning them into artificial reefs of a sort. I have attached some photos for your perusal.
