Project Update: July 2021

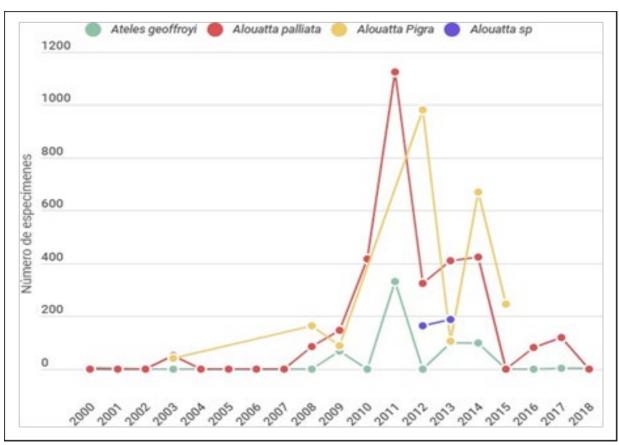

Information on primate seizures was collected for the 2010-2020 period, the information was processed and maps and relevant information were obtained indicating the places where there is the greatest flow of primate traffic in Mexico and the species that are most commercialised.

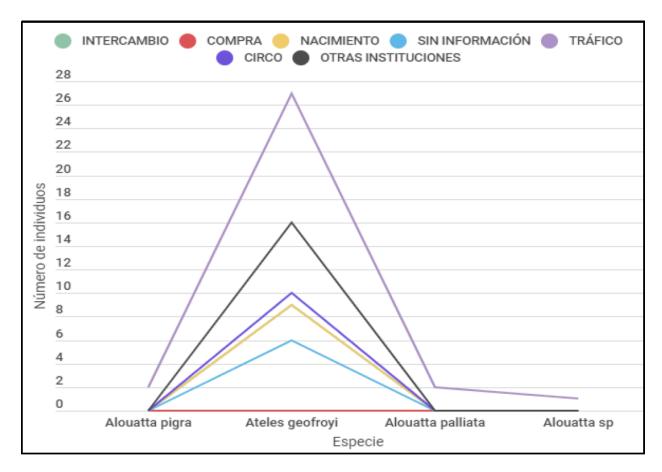

Information on international trade was collected through the CITES database and maps and graphs were created to show the findings.

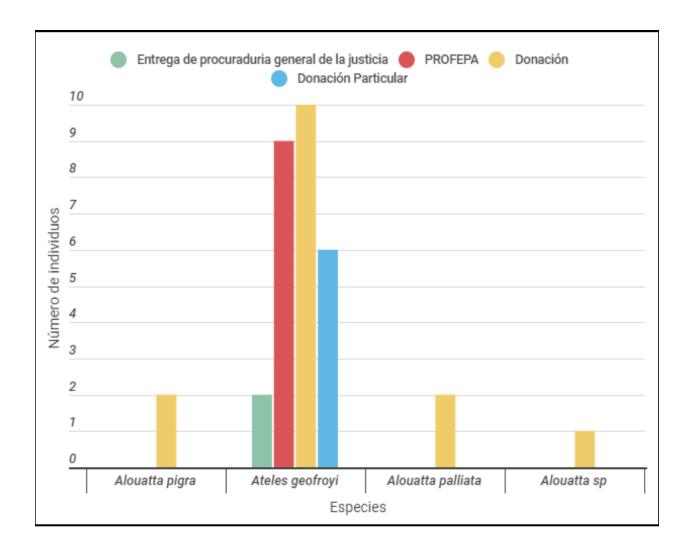

The zoos dedicated to the reception of victims of the illicit primate trade were visited and information was obtained about the work they carry out in the process of canalisation, rehabilitation and possible release of Mexican primates. Likewise, tables and graphs were created for each of the objectives, it was discussed to finally write the master's thesis.

The first phase of the documentary began to be filmed and visual materials have been made to inform about the primate trade through conservation education to improve the community's understanding of the importance of primates. As well as writing popular articles and essays.

Las tres especies de primates existentes en México están consideradas en peligro de extinción en la Nom059-SEMARNAT 2010

MONO AULLADOR DE Manto o Saraguato

MONO ARAÑA

Los monos son extraídos de su hábitat, muchas veces matando a la madre o a grupos enteros para obtener a las crías y en el transporte sufren estrés, daños físicos o incluso la muerte
