

Project Update: December 2008

This Human Rights Advocate capacity building program is a unique program and has served as an eye opener for me, most especially when it's come to environmental rights and justices.

I officially wish to take this opportunity to inform you of the numerous outstanding achievements I obtained at the end of this program:

- Certificate of participation;
- Appointed to for the first time the only advocate to serve on the selection panel for incoming applicants for this program;

I also want to let you know that two students will be coming in the summer as interns to my organization to develop a National Youth Environmental action plan that my organization will use to develop pilot projects for possible implementation in both rural and urban communities. These interns will be coming from an organization based in Washington DC known as Advocacy Project.
