

Project Update: March 2010

The past 8 months have been an exciting period of conservation work for us comprising a lot of field survey efforts interspersed with community work and conservation education. With all the activities we have had to bury our heads into, it seems to us that it has come too soon. The highlights of our RSG project over this period has been the discovery of the largest known population of a Critically Endangered species, Conraua derooi as part of our survey efforts and the aforestation of a 3 ha piece of land as part of our habitat restoration programme. In the coming months, our conservation efforts will focus mostly on dialogue with community and opinion leaders to agree on conservation action plans for the management of the Jukwa Community forest; the only home to a Critically Endangered species.
