

Project Update: April 2011

I returned from the field recently. Our team found red panda in Rara National Park which is the nearest to Khaptad National Park (where we did not detect any signs of red panda). We established one eco-club for red panda conservation in presence of the Park Authority in school. We also consulted herders. We collect faecal pellets for diet analysis and reference materials. I am now working on my extended areas for diet analysis due to absence of red panda in Khaptad National Park.
