

Project Update: May 2012

I am working on the processing of the data collected till now. I had a long field work season last year and it was a great success. We've got 3,917 registers from the censuses and more than 4,000 registers of medium and large vertebrates with the camera traps! The reserve where the study is being carried out is helping a lot as well and every month two local field assistants are still removing and installing the camera traps on the islands. Thus, we hope to get a better amount of data to analyse/write the articles. I'm planning to go soon back to the Amazon to conduct more censuses and finish the surveys with the camera traps.
