

Project Update: August 2009

Our first trip to the field site was a total success! We made contact with the different land owners requesting permission to mark the plots on their land. We located and marked the plots that will be used in our study and found brocket deer and gray fox pellets in most of them! We collected some of the pellets in order to test out the microhistological technique.

Our first official campaign will be in October/November. More to come.....
